CELEBRITIES IN THE NEWS

Modest Baritone

You hear a lot about the admirable humility of the true artist in the presence of his art, but, in my experience, you do not encounter this phenomenon very often. It gives me pleasure, therefore, to report a bit of non-public information given semi-publicly lately at a performance of "Tosca" at the Metropolitan in which Leonard Warren was making his first appearance as Scarpia, one of the plums of the baritone repertoire. The informant was Edward Johnson, erstwhile general manager of the opera house, who was exulting with some former colleagues over Mr. Warren's fine performance. "You know," said Mr. Johnson, "I urged him to do Scarpia several years ago while I was still here. His reply was that he dearly loved the role but that he honestly didn't feel he was ready for it." This from a baritone already at the top of his profession with any role his for the asking!

VIRTUOSI DI ROMA

RENATO FASANO, Director and Conductor

The members of this ensemble, being all soloists, have been listed alphabetically. Which artist appears in any given work is determined entirely by artistic exigencies.

The Virtuosi di Roma (called in Italy Collegium Musicum Italicum) was founded and directed by Renato Fasano with the avowed purpose of presenting programs containing rarely heard musical masterpieces.

Nearly all of these works are given from original scores and in accordance with the tradition of the composer's time. The composition of the ensemble is such as used by Vivaldi in the Church of Pieta in Venice and as was frequently used by Bach and others, the conductors having a special function described by Iommelli and Galuppi as 'animatori', that is to say, 'animating conductors'.

To achieve the desired results required the selection of a group of leading Italian instrumentalists whose artistic ideals would permit them to unite in a common purpose of musical execution. Success has been accorded by press and public in over 600 public concerts, reaching its culmination in the tribute of Toscanini, who stated: "You are the great instrumental ensemble of this generation and I have felt exquisite pleasure in listening to you."

BALLOT RESULTS

The results of the audience ballot have served as a valuable guide in selecting the artists for the coming season. We are now negotiating with the managements of six of the artists and attractions which received the most votes and we plan to present these in Winnipeg and western cities.

We conducted this ballot out west and the results in Calgary, Edmonton and Regina were almost identical with Winnipeg.

MEMO TO M.L.A.'s

During the deliberations of the Manitoba Legislature it is hoped that action will be taken to eliminate or at least, reduce the 17½% amusements tax. We respectfully suggest that the basis of this taxation be broadened so that patrons of concerts and presentations of an educational and cultural nature enjoy the same treatment as sports fans insofar as taxation is concerned.

VARIATIONS

Excerpts from Paderewski's Autobiography

"The average person, or the great public has no idea of the practise necessary, absolutely necessary, in the presentation of a concert. It is not sufficient to know and to play well or even beautifully the number arranged. It is not sufficient to have played the same program weeks before (and even to repeat it the next day) without incredible hours of practise and concentration. And so it is with every performance, hours of practise and mental work, and all things in addition to the never-ending finger practise — shall I call it — the technique."

And from an article in a South African Newspaper:

"Think of a foreigner, a mere pianist who comes out to this country just to play the piano and has the effrontery to charge one guinea for the seats. What robbery! Why we had here not long ago a man who could play the clarinet, the violin, a triangle, drums and accordion, and play ALL those instruments at the SAME TIME, and his price was only a shilling!"

Excerpts from musical reviews written by George Bernard Shaw, when he practised as a music critic:

There is nothing that soothes me more after a long and maddening course of piano recitals than to sit down and have my teeth drilled by a finely skilled hand.

Mr. Vladimir de Pachmann gave his well-known pantomimic performances with accompaniments by Chopin.

It showed that Mr. Wallace knows how to use every instrument except the scissors.

Memorably Performs Beethoven Concerto
Works by Haydn, Bizet Round Out Program

By Howard Taubman, New York Times, February 10, 1956.

After all the violinists who have appeared with the New York Philharmonic this season, it was fitting to have Jascha Heifetz as the soloist at Carnegie Hall last night. He is still an unsurpassed master, and his appearance was like a climactic chapter in a running story of violin virtuosos.

In the Beethoven concerto Mr. Heifetz had a work worthy of his gifts, and he gave it a memorable performance. His playing had all the virtues of understanding and simplicity that a mature artist could bring to this noble composition. Seldom has Mr. Heifetz played with greater penetration.

The style was aristocratic without being aloof. The tone was pure and responsive to the subtlest requirements of light and shade. The phrasing was full of nuance, but there was no fussiness for the sake of effect. Everything in the way of virtuosity and control was ordered for the greatest good of the music.

The tremendous first movement had power and drama, and there was unstinted bravura in the Auer cadenza here, which Mr. Heifetz almost persuaded one was integral to the work. The last movement danced and sang with high spirits. But what one will remember longest is the song of the slow movement, played with breadth of feeling and a serene comprehension.

Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic gave Mr. Heifetz well-balanced support. The orchestra was in good form.

It began the program with Haydn's E flat Symphony, No. 103, which was played with considerable sympathy for the classic style. In the slow movement particularly there was the kind of contrast and proportion that Mr. Mitropoulos has not always established in eighteenth-century music.

Another Triumph for Lois

Lois Marshall, Canada's foremost soprano, was recently chosen by Sir Thomas Beecham to sing the coveted role of the Queen of Sheba in Handel's Oratorio "Solomon", which Sir Thomas is scheduled to record for Angel Records with his Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Miss Marshall is doing her first concert tour of England in May and will also, at that time, be on hand for the "Solomon" recording this spring.

A New Talent

Phillipe Entremont, exciting young French pianist, has just recently arrived in the U.S. from France, and is now almost solidly booked for a concert tour. He has also been engaged by Eugene Ormandy and negotiations are underway with the New Orleans and Pittsburgh symphony orchestras, among others.

Conductor Re-engaged

The Orchestral Association of Minneapolis announced the re-engagement of Antal Dorati as conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. This will be Mr. Dorati's seventh season with the orchestra, which is scheduled to do its third tour of western Canada in the spring of 1957. In addition to Winnipeg, the orchestra will appear in Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, and Saskatoon.

The Wagner Opera Company

The 1956-57 season will be the 57th year for Charles L. Wagner in the musical world. For the fall of 1956, Mr. Wagner will present two productions for his tour. "La Traviata", Verdi's most poignant opera, will be presented with new scenery, magnificent costuming and a brilliant cast, and "Lusie Di Lammermoor" for which new settings are now being planned. The company numbers seventy people which includes an orchestra of twenty-six. In the past sixteen years, the Wagner Opera Company has appeared in 298 cities, and in every state in the Union but two, as well as Canada and Mexico.
